

ALL AMERICA OBSERVES LINCOLN DAY

METROPOLITAN MARKET MAY BE GIVEN UP

DEAL ON WHEREBY THE OWNERS PLAN TO QUIT THE RETAIL MEAT BUSINESS—GRAZERS PLAN TO TAKE IT OVER, CONDUCT A STRICTLY WHOLESALE BUSINESS AND SUPPLY MEAT TO RETAIL MARKETS.

If almost certain plans carry, the Metropolitan Meat Company's King street market will soon be a thing of the past, at least in so far as the sale of meats by retail is concerned.

The meat business of Honolulu will thereafter be in the hands of the Grazers Association and retailers under the control of that organization.

This change in the meat market plans is being brought about by the grazers, on the one hand, who are dissatisfied with the way the business of the Metropolitan Meat Company has been run; and the grazers are being met half way by the non-grazier stockholders, who are themselves dissatisfied and willing to draw out or to support any other business plan that may ensure a better show of dividends.

The leaders in the defection are the grazers of Hawaii Island. They have had a kick coming for more than two years, and the annual report of June last on the business of the Metropolitan Meat Company got them up in arms. This report showed a loss at the King street market alone of nearly $10,000 for the year, and a further loss at the Beretania street market of nearly $1,000. Although the slaughter house had paid and there had been a good profit in the sale of by-products, the loss in the two markets mentioned had been so great as to swamp the total profits.

The first idea of the grazers was to pull away from the Metropolitan Meat Company and start out independently. This was met by the non-grazers with a proposal to sell out to the grazers,

CORNER STONE LAID OF HILO'S GRAND MASONIC TEMPLE

HILO, February 11.—On the afternoon of Saturday, February 6, there occurred one of the most important ceremonies that has ever taken place in Hilo, important because it showed the solid growth of the Masonic fraternity here, also because it marked a new era in building and the laying of the corner stone of which will soon prove to be the largest and handsomest structure in Hilo, its Masonic Temple.

At 2 o'clock the members of Kilaua Lodge No. 330, F. and A. M., met in their temporary hall which they left at 2:30 p. m., arriving at the site of the new Temple at the corners of Bridge and Waiuanue streets exactly at 2:38 p. m.

Ten thousand people today left the home, school, office, shop, store or other place of business or pleasure to participate in the observance of the celebration of the centenary of the birth of Abraham Lincoln.

There have been greater parades and larger crowds in Honolulu turnouts, but it is doubtful if ever a more significant gathering of military forces was seen in this city.

There was something to see here today that had never been seen before.

The people seemed to know that something unusual was coming. The crowd appeared to feel that today was a day such as had never before been celebrated.

It was not alone the Territory's and the city's observance of the centenary anniversary of the birth of one of the greatest Americans, concerning whom the children have been taught in the public schools; it was not alone the mere proposition of an opportunity to see a parade, a procession, an aggregation of mounted and marching soldiery, school cadets, police and fire paraphernalia, but it was something more, it was the realization of the fact that today marks the first opportunity for the showing of something of the considerable force that has already been given to this island in the way of American military prestige. It was an object lesson, too. For the foreign elements which helped to make up the big crowd were not unconscious of the lesson conveyed by the exhibition of confident strength shown in the move of the Fifth Cavalry and the swing of the Twentieth Infantry, combined with the march of the National Guard and the promise of developing martial spirit in the boys of the Kamehameha and St. Louis schools and colleges.

The start of the parade was a little early, perhaps, 9 o'clock, and some folks who would otherwise have turned out were not able to get a glimpse of the parade, for these things usually start about 10 o'clock. But there was sufficient of the populace on the streets to see and to go home and tell those who did not see all about the inspiration of the bands and the glad sight of the troops in the imposing line that wound from street to street throughout the main thoroughfares of the city and wound up with a grand review in old historic "Palace Square."

Several thousand gathered in the neighborhood of the drillshed long before 9 o'clock, the time set for the start of the parade. They lined the sidewalks and took up much space in the drill ground and after the procession had started along Hotel to Richards street, thence to go up Richards to Beretania and so along Beretania to Fort, Vineyard, and down Nuuanu to King, there was a rush towards Nuuanu to meet the line coming down.

In the march perhaps the greatest attraction was the Fifth Cavalry, particularly the Fifth Cavalry band. People here, as a crowd, had never before seen a band on horseback and all they knew and loved of Berger's Hawaiian band could not explain to them how it was that such splendid music could be forthcoming from musicians mounted on horse.

The Cavalry was one of the most imposing spectacles. There seemed something irresistible in the manner in which they moved along, as indeed their movements are intended to be irresistible. Their horses were the subjects of remark all along. To be sure, they are not groomed and polished such as one has seen abroad in long and carefully planned parades where much time is allowed for the "curry-combing and toileting of the mounts, but it must be remembered that these animals have only been recently shipped from the mainland, have been across the ocean, have been in quarantine at camp, have not been endowed with the permanent quarters which they will soon receive and, last but not least, had to be ridden from the mountains, from Camp Leliehua, with only a brief stop at Fort Shafter, before they appeared in the parade. That they are fine, sturdy, business-like horses was a conviction that struck everybody. The leaders, those who bore officers, pranced to the entire satisfaction of the ladies, and the formation was as near perfect as could

TIMELY TALK TO ENGINEERS

A largely attended and most interesting meeting of the Hawaiian Engineering Association was held last evening, at which Mr. Young, of the College of Hawaii, read an instructive paper on the use of low grade coal for engineering purposes. His paper and talk were accompanied by stereopticon views, showing the use to which this coal is put in Colorado. The purposes of the paper was to show that while the supply of coal was lessening year by year, there was no cause for serious alarm as science was solving the problem of finding an important place for the class of coal hitherto considered of little or no value.

The meeting was more fully attended than any recently held, as the subject was one of especial interest to manufacturing and milling interests. Mr. Young's paper will be printed and circulated among the members of the Association.

THE VOLCANO STILL ACTIVE

Surveyor E. D. Baldwin lately visited the Volcano of Kilaua, in whose phases he has long taken much interest. He found its activity but slightly if at all reduced from the time of a shortly previous visit. Great commotion at brief intervals still occurs in the burning lake. Mr. Baldwin says it does not seem to be generally known that in September last the pit of Halemaumau gave indications of soon overflowing. Within a few weeks the lava had risen from a distance of 190 feet to one of 100 feet from the lowest gap in the top of the walls. Since then it has somewhat subsided.

THE PACIFIC WEEKLY.

The Pacific Weekly, Honolulu's liveliest periodical, will contain tomorrow, among other good things, a story of a strike in local newspaperdom which threw the town into a state of panic. The leading editorial deals with Tag Day and similar charity schemes in no very friendly manner. "Johnny the Gent," will keep the date which he neglected last week and the office poet will jingle about Mayflower. "It is Said," "Pertinent Pars," and the usual sporting features will make up a number which no one should miss.

A wireless from the transport Sheridan this morning stated that she would arrive in port tomorrow morning.

There was no session of the district court this morning, all cases set for today going over to tomorrow.

This has been one of the quietest days on record in police circles. Not an arrest of any importance has been made since yesterday.

At an adjourned caucus of Democratic legislators held last evening the bills to be presented to the coming legislature, to which reference has already been made, were further discussed. As Senator Moore was unavoidably absent nothing definite was decided upon.

Assistant Lighthouse Inspector Moses has issued the following notice in regard to damage by the recent storm to the buoy service at Kahului:

Kahului Harbor, Maui Island—Entrance Buoy 2, red 1st-class nun, private aid maintained by Kahului Railroad Company, reported broken away from its moorings during a recent storm will be replaced as soon as practicable.
